

Queens Chronicle

Your Community Newspaper

Classifieds Yellow Pages Today's Ads News

Rain 57°

SUNDAY DECEMBER 23, 2007

SEARCH:  Site  Google  Advanced Search

EXCLUSIVELY FROM
verizonwireless Learn More

NEWS

- South Queens
- Central Queens
- Eastern Queens
- Southeast Queens
- Mid Queens
- Northern Queens
- Northeast Queens
- Western Queens
- Queenswide
- Anniversary Edition

OPINION

- Editorial
- Letters to the Editor

SPECIAL SECTIONS

- PrimeTimes: Seniors
- Celebration Of Queens
- Health & Fitness

SPORTS

- Local Sports

ENTERTAINMENT

- qboro
- Arts Listing
- Community Calendar
- I Have Often Walked
- Queens Timeline

BUSINESS DIRECTORY

In A Feminist Tradition

by Laurel Angrist, Qboro Correspondent
04/12/2007

Email to a friend Post a Comment Printer-friendly

There are just two more week ends to catch “From the Inside Out,” an exhibition that explores the legacy of feminist artwork — from the pioneering women of the 1970s to modern works by women who place themselves within the feminist tradition that followed.

The show, at St. John’s University’s art gallery, reveals striking continuities in the body of work that addresses female self-image, women’s bodies and politics. It brings together 43 pieces in a range of media that includes painting, sculpture, photography and video, each of which touch on what it means to be a woman living in a patriarchal culture.

Groundbreaking contributions by early feminist artists, who first sought to create a space and voice for women, are represented here by such giants as Joyce Kozloff and Kay WalkingStick. The show celebrates their accomplishments and illustrates the rich and varied ways in which women work creatively, both then and now.

Among the contemporary works on display is one compelling series by artist Cheryl Yun, who prints onto Japanese tissue paper images from the media’s coverage of the war on terror, then fashions the fabric into lingerie. Delicate panties and matching camisoles, patterned with imagery from the fall of Baghdad, hang on a garment rack as they would in an upscale boutique. “I’m interested in creating objects that embody conflict and question our consumer and visual culture,” said Yun, 36, a photography instructor at Parsons School for Design.

“From the Inside Out: Feminist Art Then and Now,” will be on view through April 21 at the Dr. M.T. Geoffrey Yeh Art Gallery at St. John’s University, 80-00 Utopia Parkway, Jamaica Estates. Hours are Tuesdays to Thursdays 10 a.m.-5 p.m., Fridays 10 a.m-3 p.m. and Saturdays from noon to 3 p.m.